

DESCRIPTION OF ALIENS

By

Emilia Andersson

The Kenishaaks are a small, humanoid alien species. If I had to compare them to an animal from Earth, they look like bipedal elephants with arms like trunks.

One thing I noticed that I found particular with them is their uninterest or distress at physical contact. When we made a trade I tried to shake their hand/trunk out of old habits but was rejected. It was explained to me that their immune system is very weak and they prefer to avoid contact.

The frail immune system is perhaps also reflected in the lack of any Kenishaak children, or at least from what I could tell.

Instead they showed how they politely greet each other. It is by simply pulling their clothes on the left side and nod. Interesting, I have friends on Earth that absolutely despise shaking hands. Maybe I should introduce them to the Kenishaak greeting?

Jack, over and out.